

EAL this week

Part 1

Miss Maybanks' Year 10 EAL class have read the first part of The Hate U Give by Angie Thomas and writing from different points of view about equal rights. Read their work below.

The problem is about their skin colour and licence, the guy is not following what they want but they shouldn't treat him by smacking him against the car door until he died. I think it is really wrong. They should treat people equally no matter what colour skin they have, we are all human, right? This needs to stop. Evijenja Andrade 10F

I feel the police man is wrong because they just can't do whatever they want, "everyone should be treated equally". Do not just judge by the skin colour or gender. The police man should understand and control himself. They are police, if they don't do this then who will stop them? The government should take action if this is going to go on ... So, I am talking as the point of view who saw the whole thing while passing by... Britney Gomes 10F

From the point of view of a person who passed by and who saw the whole thing. He thought the police was bullying him because of his skin colour and was acting kind of racist and he should control his temper and treat everyone equally, and also, he needs to get fired from the job too. Bryce Gomes 10E

From the point of view of a passer-by who saw the whole thing, the police are in the wrong. He didn't have a motive to kill Khalil – who was just driving. Joao Tognolo 10L

The policeman was arresting someone and he violently shot three times the man and threatened with the same gun the other person... In my opinion, this is not right. Nathan Sonnenfeld 10F

Part 2

EAL Phrase of the week – Mental Health Awareness – in honour of Mental Health Awareness Week. Here is the phrase in some of the languages that our EAL students speak:
